

The villas are equally opulent and offer the chance to be totally secluded from the outside world. There are eight one-bedroom pool villas and four Sareeraya Pool Villas with pool access. These villas are huge, with 100sqm of floor space, featuring areas for lounging, reading, working, watching television and, of course, sleeping. Even the bathrooms have been blessed with special features, such as an indoor Jacuzzi. Outside, in each villa's private garden there is a Jacuzzi plunge pool complete with a rain shower.

But what would a resort be without a star attraction? Here it comes in the form of the Grand Sareeraya Villa: a massive two-bedroom villa of 300sqm, filled with colour and radiance. The villa has an indoor Jacuzzi bathroom as well as a private garden and outdoor Jacuzzi swimming pool.

All the suites and villas have LCD televisions, DVD players, iPods for music and high-speed Internet connections. The facilities on the resort's premises are many. For times when guests are not lolling about on the beach, there are three swimming pools and one for children, too. Relaxation is high on the agenda and so there are also four massage gazebos where soothing hands await tired and weary bodies.

For guests who find it hard to let go of the working world, there is a small meeting room with a projector and space for 10 people. Meanwhile, there is also a function room that can accommodate up to 60 – just enough for an intimate wedding or birthday celebration. Of course, there's a restaurant serving all kinds of international dishes and a bar where guests can kick back after a long day of loafing. And Samui's great range of attractions are always on offer too.

The travel industry excitedly awaits the launch of Sareeraya Villas & Suites. But even more keen are the fans of top-shelf travel experiences, who have already marked this as one to try.
